NTE1015 company had been through an acquisition for the last 1,5 years, it turned out to be an international company from a Turkish family-owned business. At the end of the process, the GM role was appointed internally among the n-1 level. There are some challenges and difficulties ahead of the GM.

- It is not clear for the employees what the company aims for with the shareholder change.
- Due to the intense rivalry for the GM role before the assignment, there seems to be silos among the management team. And this has stated to become an obstacle about team being.
- Due to acquisition, some internal processes had been pending like investments and people related issues like organizational structure, promotions, people development, etc…
- Gossiping has become a habitual part of the culture for the last 1,5 years. And, people are used to rely on the rumors more than official announcements.
- The strategic roadmap of the company has been recently agreed with the new shareholder by the assigned GM, so the vision and strategy is clear on the paper.
- In addition, an engagement survey was conducted and the result is pretty poor/low which indicates the below problems via feedbacks from the anonymous engagement survey;
  - Employees don't trust the company & company leaders/management team,
  - Employees are not aware of what the company is trying to achieve & what is going on in the company
  - The feedback from the employees is mainly, 'I don't know why I am doing what I am doing and could not see my contribution to the big picture'
  - No unified management approach towards employees from managers, each leads her/his team through personal perspective, vision, approach, style, management experience; some are too harsh, some are too easygoing with their teams which creates performance & cultural problems among the teams
  - Some executive leaders (from the C-Level) are not behaving in the direction (people management & business management) that is defined by the CEO, even one of them is almost representing the absolute contradiction

Q1-30%

Which business challenge/s is standing for NTE1015 Company? Explain with the symptoms that are visible in the case.

Q2-70%

Which leadership model & style/s should GM be applying and why? Specify with exact reasons from the case.