LEADERSHIP & MANAGEMENT

by ÖZLEM YILMAZ

1. Which leadership theory do you see in Billy's leadership approach & what makes you think so? 20 points
2. How do you describe Billy's leadership mistakes? 40 points
   - in terms of 3 basic needs – 15 points
   - in terms of EQ- 25 points
3. Which leadership theory do you recommend Billy to follow & why (as much as concrete & specific)? 40 points

Due date April, 18th.

DISTINCTIVE ASPECTS…

Leadership	Management
…is about coping w/producing change …is about setting the direction of the change …involves 'setting direction', 'aligning people' …provides inspiration & motivation to people …is more inductive in nature …is about doing the right thing …concentration is on how	…is about coping w complexity …brings order, predictability to a situation …involves 'planning & budgeting', 'organizing & staffing' …provides control and solution to problems …is more deductive in nature …is about doing things right …concentration is on what

WHAT MAKES A LEADER?

…something to do w ‘dealing adversity’

- …an individual ability to find meaning in negative things and to learn from even the most trying circumstances
- …like phoenixes rising from their ashes, they emerge from adversity stronger, more confident in themselves and their purpose

Such transformative events are called ‘crucibles’- a severe test or trial

WHAT MAKES A LEADER?

- Crucibles are intense, often traumatic- and always unplanned.
  - Some are violent, life-threatening events like ilness, violence, traumatic seperation from parent during childhood.
  - Some are more prosaic episodes of self-doubt, loss of a job

- A crucible, by definition, a transformative experience through which an individual comes to a new and altered sense of identity.
  - Mostly being a victim, forces an individual to confront a distorted picture of him/her
  - It unleashes feelings of anger, bewilderment and even withdrawal.
  - It is also a clarifying event for a clear vision of who they are, the role they play and their place in the world

SENSE OF SELF...

William James describes two basic personality types; 'once-born' and 'twice-born'

- Once-born; those for whom adjustments to life have been straightforward and whose lives have been more or less a peaceful flow since birth
  - ...the sense derives from a feeling of being at home and in harmony with one's environment
- Twice-born; have not had an easy time of it. Their lives are marked by a continual struggle to attain some sense of order. They can't take things granted.
  - ...the sense of self derives from a feeling of profound seperateness
  - ...the sense of self does not depend on membership, work roles or social indicators of social identity

ADOLF HITLER...

ADOLF HITLER…

- He had a very distressing childhood. Instead of being emotionally nurtured, he was from a very young age, frequently humiliated and beaten by his father, Alois.
- At the age of 14, his father Alois died. At the age of 18, Klara, his mother, died from breast cancer, his greatest loss in his life.
- Hitler suffered severe fear of abandonment as an adult, even when he was Fuhrer.
  - …plenty of evidence of his nightmares, cries of terror and shrieks in the night at the image of his long dead father, even when at the pinnacle of his power.
  - …feared the Jews, he feared medicine (even though he allowed his doctor to heavily medicate him as he got older and more stressed), he feared heights, he feared being poisoned and had a food taster, and he feared death, although he committed suicide.
- It is more than likely that Hitler suffered from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder as a result of his childhood.

ABOUT HITLER…

- Strategy
  - Hitler was a very good strategist. The main point of Hitler's strategy was the accumulation of Lebensraum ("Living space") for the Germanic race.
    - He declared that the German borders were too restricted to secure their suitable position in the geo-political world relations, and that he wanted regions similar to the (British and French) colonies to secure enough economic resources to assure Germany's position as a major power.
    - To promote his views and show the strength of the country, he promoted the idea of 'nationalism', supreme race.
    - He connected with people's fears, hopes and latent desire to blame others for their predicament; in an economic crisis millions of people suddenly decided to turn to an unconventional leader they thought had 'charisma'.
    - Hitler told millions of Germans that they were "special" and racially "better" people than everyone else, something that helped cement the charismatic connection between the leader and led.

ABOUT HITLER…

- Propaganda & Communication
  - Hitler was revealing his passion through his speeches.
  - He understood human nature so well.
  - He knew that the people were hurting after World War I, and played on those feelings by "successfully using propaganda to bring the whole nation under his influence through the constant use of media and communications." As a result of bombarding the country with his anti-sematic thoughts he was able to get "a whole nation to think alike to serve his cause."
  - For it was his thought that "If you repeat a lie often enough, people will believe it." Hitler always addressed his followers with a sense of purpose for his nation, Germany, and his vision of how great it would become if they followed him. It is said, "his words moved a country, even the church to believe that they were killing in the name of God. That was the extent of his charisma."

ABOUT HITLER…

- Propaganda & Communication
  - He knew that by arriving late at the meeting point would develop tension among the audience and make them expecting him. When he was arriving at the stage he was standing attention and was waiting for every one to stop talking so as to have total silence and then to start. His moves and gestures were so forceful. He was walking from side to side at the stage and he was gesturing with his hands and the tone of his voice was loud and passionate. He was sweating; his face was getting white, his eyes were bulged and his voice was full of emotion. He was shouting about the unfairness's and prejudices done to Germany and he was making his audience to be full of hate and jealousy. So by the end of his speech the crowd was in a condition near to madness and was willing to do everything Hitler was implying. Hitler appealed to the values and ethics of the German people.

LEADERSHIP STYLE

- Task oriented
  - Hitler was a high task oriented leader. He had clear vision and knowledge of the path for execute his strategy.
  - He had the vigor and persistence in pursuit of goals
  - He wanted to monitor everything and retain control of every task (very controlling and distrusted everyone).
- Relationship oriented & Influencer
  - He had really good interpersonal relations with those who worked closest with him. He knew personal details for them, which shows that he was interested in them and in their personal psychological health. He was visiting them when they were ill fact, which shows that he was interested about their physical health.
  - Hitler's most powerful skill was his ability to influence people. He knew his audience and with his social-judgment skills which focus on "perspective-taking (empathy), social perceptiveness (ability to read social cues), behavioral flexibility (ability to adapt solutions to changing circumstances), and social performance (persuasive ability)"
  - He was able to convenience an entire nation to perform horrific acts of violence against their neighbors. With his propaganda campaign that reinforced his public speaking messages he was in many ways able to brainwash an entire society to believe that is was the Jewish race that was at the root of their problems. That the Jewish people were inferior to the pureblooded German people and so began the events that lead up to and encompassed the Holocaust and began a World War.

WHAT WAS HITLER MISSING?

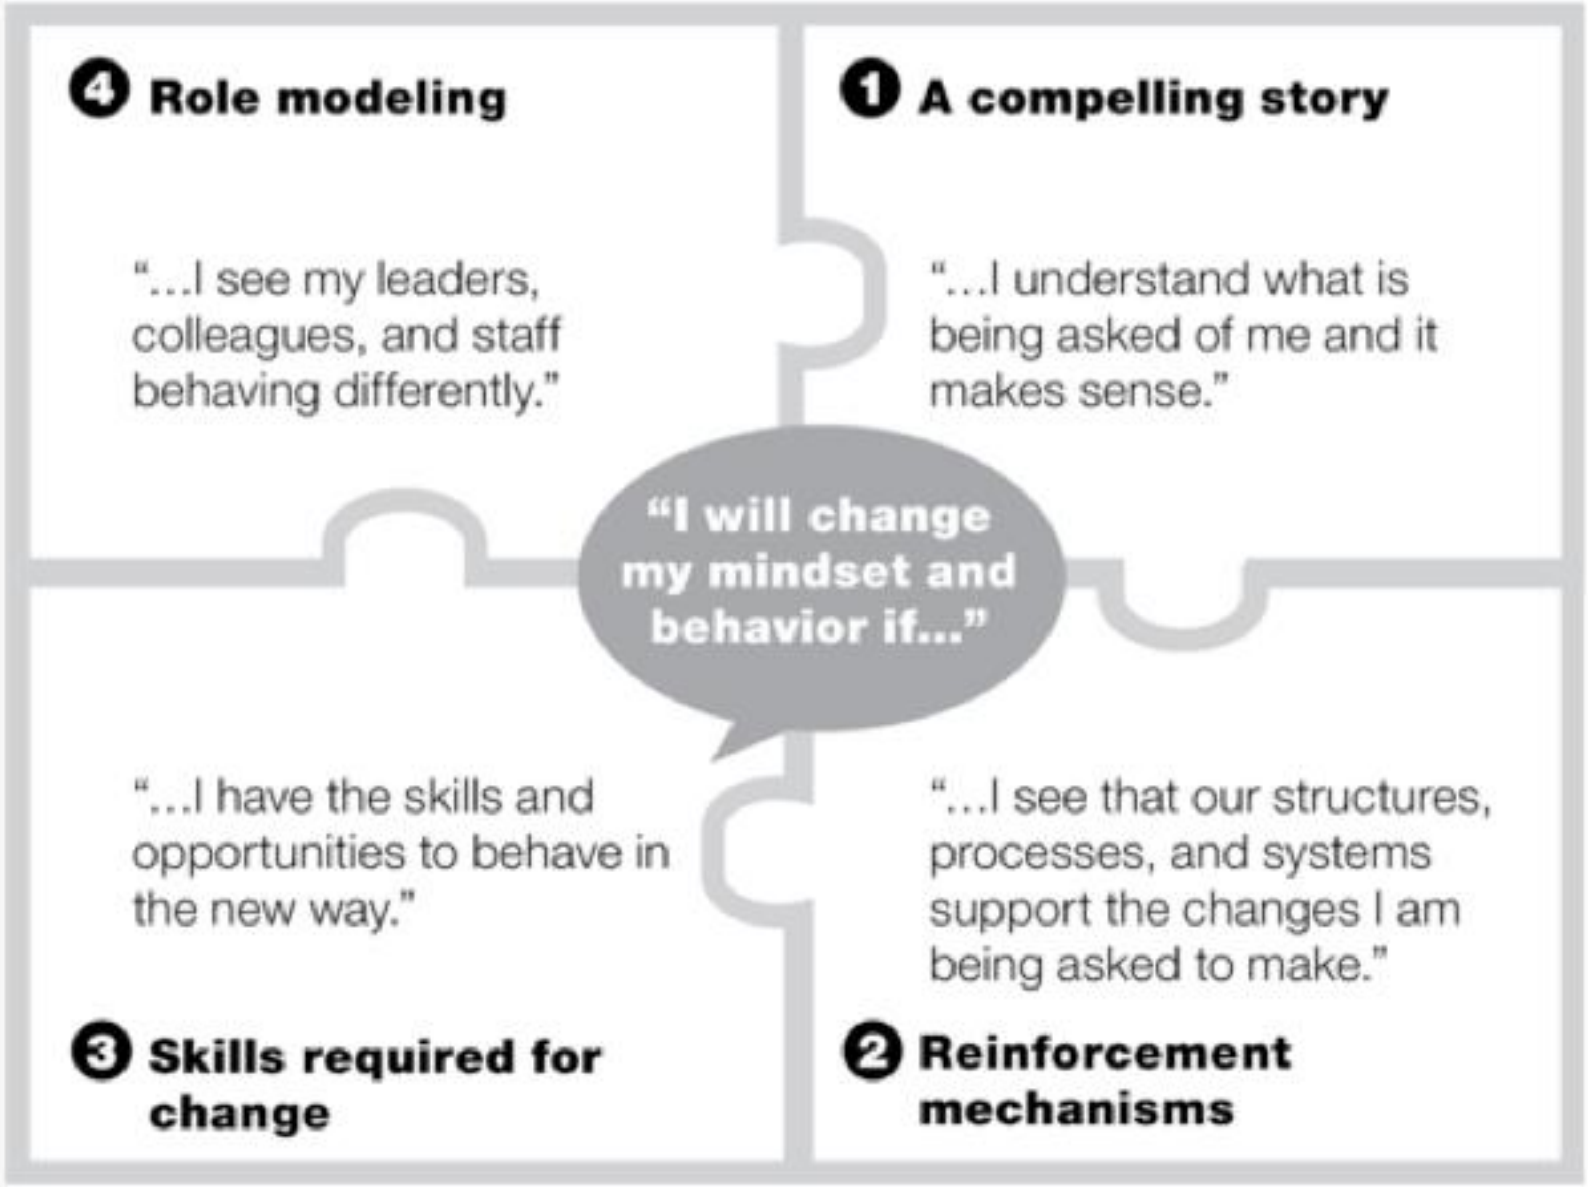

ABOUT HITLER…

Integrity!

- Hitler's lack of ethical reasoning.
- He was unethical in thoughts and actions, taking advantage of situations, which his followers were in, in the most vicious approach to reach his goals.

By manipulating his army to put Jews into extermination camps, is the biggest example not only of his immoral and wicked character but also his twisted mind.

The Four Levers of the Influence Model

TRANSFORMATIONAL LEADERSHIP…

- …was first introduced by Dowton in 1973 and then by James MacGregor Burns, first started w political leaders then used for corporate leaders as well
- …"is the process whereby a person engages with others and creates a connection that raises the level of motivation and morality in both the leader and the follower"
- … was the first developed and validated theory to emphasis morals and values in leadership
- … focuses on how leaders can create valuable and positive change in their followers
- …focuses on treating employees as human beings rather than just numbers

Followers of a transformational leader respond by feeling trust, admiration, loyalty, and respect for the leader and are more willing to work harder than originally expected.

TRANSFORMATIONAL LEADERSHIP…

…talks about the kind of leader who is inspirational and charismatic, encouraging their followers to transform and become better in whatever they are doing

- …charisma plays an important role, so does behavior
  - transformational leaders appear competent to their followers
  - they are role models for values and morals
  - they ensure that goals are clear, they set high expectations, and they motivate their followers

- …transformational leaders have the respect of their followers and their followers have a high degree of trust towards the leader

TRANSFORMATIONAL LEADERSHIP…

4 factors of transformational leadership by Bernard M. Bass;

- …idealized influence, leaders appear competent to their followers, they are role models for values and morals, they ensure that goals are clear, they set high expectations, and they motivate their followers
- …inspirational motivation; leaders set and communicate high expectations for their followers. This leader inspires his/her followers using motivation to get them on board with the mission and vision
- …individualized consideration, leaders who take the time to talk to and listen to each of their followers and treats them with respect and dignity
- …intellectual stimulation, leaders who encourage followers to seek out creativity and innovation

TRANSFORMATIONAL LEADERSHIP…

- Followers of a transformational leader respond by feeling trust, admiration, loyalty, and respect for the leader and are more willing to work harder than originally expected.

Personality Characteristics	Behaviors	Effects on Followers
Dominant	Sets strong role model	Trust in leader's ideology
Desire to influence	Shows competence	Belief similarity between leader and follower
Self-confident	Articulates goals	Unquestioning acceptance
Strong moral values	Communicates high expectations	Affection toward leader
	Expresses confidence	Obedience
	Arouses motives	Identification with leader
		Emotional involvement
		Heightened goals
		Increased confidence

TRANSFORMATIONAL LEADERSHIP…

- Transformational leadership;
  - requires vision, values, initiative and a drive to instill that vision and the values into the culture
  - is a composition of many leadership elements which requires action from the leader
  - also has the potential to be used negatively by leaders "faking it."